For real indeed has a kind of slangy/childish connotation, which I'm sure is why it was used in the title of that movie (a quick Google search reveals that the film is about a four-year-old who has a near-death experience).

Correct spelling for real.

This has come to mean: search for a particular web site or thing on the Internet. This is a little different from "look it up" which could be in an address book or other index. And quite different from "search for" which indicates that you don't know if you will find it. Of course, it is colloquial. I recently wrote
