

The Atlas William T Vollmann

The Atlas is a 1996 semi-autobiographical work by American novelist William T. Vollmann. A mixture of fiction and non-fiction, this book was drawn from Vollmann's experiences traveling around the world. He relates these experiences through 53 interconnected stories that weave their way through the novel.

The Atlas is what it sounds like, a collection of short stories, travel reports, and prose sketches that describe, in some detail, the world according to William T. Vollmann. "Too much contemplation of any object, however unwilling the gaze," he writes, "may reveal a secret." This could pass as the man's mission statement. Many fans say
